CORRECTIONAL FOOD SERVICE MANAGER II

As manager of a food service operation, employees are responsible for planning, directing, and supervising the preparation and serving of food to inmates at medium-sized correctional facilities with generally like inmate populations; or within one of the most complex facilities, manages a section or shift in a food service operation. Work involves supervision of staff and inmates and the performance of responsibilities in all phases of food management including food procurement and storage, menu planning for substitutions, food preparation and service, sanitation, and record keeping. Employees make adjustments in feeding schedules and special diets which result from limited shifts in inmate populations. Work includes planning and managing the food service operation within a large budget. Employees work independently under limited supervision of the Assistant Correctional Superintendent for Custody and Operations or report to a Correctional Food Service Manager IV. Work is evaluated through routine inspections and analysis of reports. Work at this level is distinguished from the next lowest level by differences in size of inmate population, and/or staff size, and/or operational dynamics of correctional facility.

I. SUPERVISORY/MANAGERIAL FUNCTIONS:

Planning - Employees generally plan annually within a fiscal budget cycle. Planning includes development of bimonthly menu plans for substitutions, food ordering, weekly and/or monthly work schedules, and food service production schedules. Priorities and deadlines are usually established weekly within assigned objectives and goals.

Organizing and Directing - Employees assign work schedules to subordinate supervisors; make adjustments as necessary for priorities; balance the workload; and decide whether to reassign inmates to different work assignments. Employees may also develop and establish work rules, methods, and procedures.

Budgeting - Employees have limited involvement in the development, justification or allocation of budget funds. Employees independently approve and reject expenditures relating to food inventory without further review. Employees provide input to supervisor on the needs of the food service operation for new equipment and/or for increases in budget for inventory based on operational needs.

Training - Employees provide on-the-job training for staff through observation, reports, conferences and informal discussions to assure compliance with operational standards and established policies.

Setting Work Standards - Employees may develop work rules governing food service operations to ensure that quality and quantity of work is met.

Reviewing Work - Employees review work of subordinate staff daily to ensure compliance with operational standards and established policies.

Counseling and Disciplining - Employees discuss problems with staff and issue initial oral warnings for disciplinary actions. More serious problems and grievances are referred to higher-level management; employees recommend action to be taken.

Performing Other Personnel Functions - Employees interview applicants for positions supervised and make recommendations to higher-level management on hiring decisions. Employees provide input on discussions concerning promotions and salary adjustments for employees supervised. Employees participate in subordinates' performance evaluations and approve leave requests.

II. SCOPE AND NATURE OF WORK SUPERVISED:

Dynamics of Work Supervised - Operations are generally stable but are periodically affected by changes in methodology, guidelines, and shifting programs emphasis (e.g., court decisions, therapeutic diets). These changes may require employees to develop new approaches or procedures to meet operational objectives.

Variety of Work Supervised - Employees supervise staff responsible for custody and security; computer input; standardized procurement, receipt, storage, and inventory management; and production of food goods in the correctional system.
